

THAW CLAIMS THAT HE WAS A TOURIST

FACES SWEEPING INQUIRY FOR TWO HOURS THIS MORNING.

TRIED BEFORE BOARD

Appointed by Canadian Government to Decide Whether He Shall Be Deported or Not.

Coaticook, Que., Sept. 4.—For two hours today Harry K. Thaw, fugitive from justice, faced a special board of inquiry seeking to deport him from the Dominion under the immigration act and pressed the point that he entered Canada as a tourist and as such was not amenable to deportation. The board agreed to consider his contention and at noon adjourned until two o'clock.

On Stand. Thaw was sworn and took the stand. He was followed by H. Johnston, a farmer who drove him, over the border, and there deserted him, and by Ben Cadieux, at whose inn at Barford he stopped late at night. The testimony was taken in secret, only snatches of it could be obtained from counsel.

Entering Canada. The questioning up to adjournment at noon all bore on the clause involving "entering Canada by stealth." The point of insanity was not touched upon, excepting a quick decision and then to the Vermont border with Thaw.

William Travers Jerome paced up and down the station platform below the immigration detention room where the hearing was held, with his eyes ready to start on an instant's notice.

Petition Denied. Counsel for Thaw state announced this afternoon that Judge Hutchinson at St. Lawrence had refused to grant La Flamme of Thaw's counsel a writ of prohibition. The board convened again shortly after two o'clock. Up to 2:30 no word had come from the room as to the decision on Thaw's claim that he was a tourist.

Up Early. Harry K. Thaw slept well and was up early today to appear before a special board of inquiry authorized under the Dominion's drastic immigration law to order him deported should it find that he had been an inmate of an institution for the insane or that he had crossed the border by stealth. The scene of the secret hearing was the office just off the immigration detention room where Thaw spent the night under guard, and 9:20 was the hour set for the opening.

Witnesses Ready. E. Blake Robertson, assistant superintendent of immigration, was the presiding officer, assisted by inspectors Reynolds, Williams and Garneau. Two physicians, Doctors Guerd and Beauchamp, were on hand to examine him, and Dr. Raymond, chief superintendent of the Matthea asylum, was held in readiness to testify as to Thaw's confinement there as the insane slayer of Stanford White.

Short Distance. It was only five miles from here at Barford on Tuesday, August 19, that Thaw was first arrested after his entrance in Canada. Thaw's lawyers, somewhat demoralized after yesterday's developments, spent the night exhausted as they were in conferences. All were pessimistic and gave it as their opinion that an attempt was being made to railroad their client across the line. In the unexplained absence of J. N. Green, chief counsel, N. K. La Flamme of Montreal assumed the head of the Thaw forces.

Thaw Indignant. Thaw was indignant this morning when he learned that reports of his breaking down under the strain had been circulated. Although his porters were allowed to see him he sent this word down by a guard, adding that he had received early today a message from his mother saying she was on her way here in response to his appeals.

Jerome Watchful. William Jerome, whose brains got Thaw out of the Sherbrooke jail where he entreated to remain until the king's bench passed in October, said he would not come to see him today unless it was necessary. He has with him the almost unmentionable Thaw trial exhibits together with transcripts of Thaw's erratic testimony at the habeas corpus proceedings. He was ready to submit these as evidence that Thaw is not a sane man, or if not sane a man who should not be allowed to enter the Dominion.

Crowds on Streets. This morning crowds surrounded the Grand Trunk railway station which houses the immigration headquarters, but none could get a glimpse of Thaw. Sheriff Hornbeck of Duane county, N. Y., who waited for more than a week in vain in Sherbrooke, joined the New York party here today preparatory to the seizure of Thaw on American soil. Present plans do not indicate that Thaw will be taken to the United States again, not far from Norton Mills, Vt., about nine miles from here, as the crowd flies.

Met at 9:30. The board assembled at 9:15 and sent out for a bible to swear witnesses. "It may last half an hour. It may last a week," said the chairman as he went upstairs. Jerome and Dr. Kiehl came down and stood in front of the station. La Flamme of Thaw's counsel did not appear and it was said he had left town suddenly.

Thaw Impatient. There was delay in getting the inquiry under way. Thaw became impatient, stepped close to a window and let the crowd get a sight of him. He had on his straw hat and was smoking a pipe. Jerome passed under the window but did not look up. Four Dominion police blocked the entrance to the stairway. A woman came with flowers for Thaw and was denied admittance.

Better have your machines ready, boys," said Jerome to the newspapermen. "We will soon be in Vermont. The board went into session at 9:55. Thaw on Stand. The first person examined was Thaw himself. He was questioned as to his entrance into Canada. Thaw said he boarded a train at Rochester, N. Y., and that his objective point

Rumors that she and the woman had frequently been seen together have led to the first intimation Wagner had of anything wrong and following further developments due to a letter from Germany which said Schwenke was en route to the police. Both the couples are about middle age. Schwenke and Wagner were fellow employees.

Fred Schnell as president of the board of public works has general supervision over the building of the half million dollar plant now being put in. Schnell makes no objection to the new plan and his pretty daughter, Ada, got into the habit of motoring out with him. It appears, however, that while the president of the board was solemnly engaged in examining technical features of the plant and noting the progress each day, his daughter and the good looking foreman found time to get acquainted. Yesterday Schnell got word from the plant that one of the foremen was missing at the same time that his wife eloped with him. Schnell smelled a rat. He telephoned to Winona to county Judge Vance known as the marrying judge in this part of the state and just in time to prevent Vance tying the knot, which would make Miss Schnell Mrs. Groothoss. The court refused to perform the ceremony on the ground that the bride was not under eighteen, but love was not easily to be thwarted. The couple proceeded promptly to the residence of Rev. C. Arthur Cook, pastor of the Central Methodist Episcopal church and presenting the license previously obtained were married. Then they eloped home to father, but the foreman who won the bride lost his job. With his wife he has proceeded to Iowa in search of other employment.

MAY DEFER ACTION ON CURRENCY BILL

SENATOR WEEKS INTRODUCES RESOLUTION TO POSTPONE FINAL VOTE UNTIL DECEMBER.

Washington, Sept. 4.—A resolution to direct the senate banking committee to withhold final action on the administration currency bill until the December session of congress was introduced today by Senator Weeks of Massachusetts, republican.

BANKERS STATE CASE

Claim Set Forth That Proposed Law Would Place Whole Burden on Commercial Banks of the Nation.

Washington, Sept. 4.—A resolution to direct the senate banking committee to withhold final action on the administration currency bill until the December session of congress was introduced today by Senator Weeks of Massachusetts, republican. Suggestions by Senators Keel, Owen and other democrats of the committee that they would like to discuss the resolution resulted in Senator Weeks agreeing that it should go over until tomorrow without action. He said: he would then endeavor to force the senate to decide whether it wants to proceed with the government to issue the banking committee to conduct hearings until December.

No Special Emergency. "There is no emergency at the present time that has not existed in an emergency for the past two years which would necessitate banking and currency legislation," he said.

Pestus J. Wade, of the Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis, one of the representatives of the Chicago conference of bankers, told the senate banking committee today that the administration currency bill would put the whole burden of organization of the commercial banks of the country.

"The national banks are simply the commercial banks moving the merchandise and commerce of the nation," he said. "This bill in its principles ignores the great banking strength that has really developed the country—the state banks and trust companies that have financed building and development, the farming and internal improvements."

"Fatal Economic Mistake." Inducements necessary to draw in the state and national banks had apparently been lost sight of, he thought. Wade declared the issue of currency and the handling of the bank reserve should be divided and not joined as in the new bill. "It would be a fatal economic mistake for the government to issue the currency of the nation," he said, "because it would put the government in debt just that much more than is necessary."

He declared the bankers appeared not as bankers, but as public spirited citizens, in urging the change. "We say don't get the credit of the government behind this great issue of notes. The time may easily come when the nation's credit will need all the strength it can command for emergency."

TALK STATE PAYING CAMPAIGN EXPENSES

Subject Discussed at Recent Conference of Governors—Believed Necessary Reform.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 4.—The campaign started before the legislature last winter to have the state pay the campaign expenses limited in amounts was one of the features of the governor's conference at Colorado Springs. Senator George E. Scott introduced a bill to permit the state to pay the expenses, but the finance committee took unfavorable action on the measure. A bill to pay the expenses of delegates to national conventions by the state was introduced by Assemblyman Everett of Racine, but was defeated. Miles C. Riley, secretary of the governor's conference, says that the feeling was quite general among the governors that this was the next great reform to be made to the election laws.

"Papers upon the subject were read by Governors Baldwin of Connecticut and C. W. Johnson of Wyoming," Mr. Riley today. "The position taken by these governors was that the payment of nomination and election expenses by the state was the next logical step in election reform. It was not advocated that all expenses of nominees and candidates be paid, but it was strongly urged that insofar as it seems impossible to hold down campaign expenditures even under the corrupt practice acts, the state should contribute to the expense of the candidate, and in this way make it possible for persons to be elected to office without obligations to private individuals. The gist of the discussion focused on the propriety of the scheme. The feeling was quite general that the reform advocated was necessary, and that it was just a question of how to work it out for practical application. A number of governors, including Governors Colquhoun of Texas and Slaton of Georgia, took the stand that the plan of the state would utterly destroy the personal element entering into campaigns. Governor of Wisconsin on the other hand, insisted that if the use of private funds in campaigns were eliminated that the one dominating element in the campaign would be the personal character of the candidate and qualifications of the candidate."

Mr. Riley said that the plan of Governor Hodges of Kansas, of a one house legislature invoked wide discussion, but that the scheme was not adopted by all of the governors. He said that many governors said all interests and sections should be represented in a legislative body.

SOME FREAK DANCES PRONOUNCED VULGAR

All Are Capable of Vulgar Interpretations in Opinion of American Dancing Masters.

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 4.—Of all the "steed" dances which have been analyzed by the International Association of Masters of Dancing, who yesterday held a three day session here, the "Tango," the "Hesitation Waltz," the "Hitchy Koo" and the "Peacock Glide" are all right if danced with decorum. This is the opinion laid down at the first consideration of the steps in these dances. P. H. Kelly, of Holyoke, Mass., secretary of the association, declared that the "Turkey Trot," the "Horse Trot" and the "Grizzly Bear" were "freak dances."

"We will never recognize them," he said. "The dancing is from the hips up instead of from the hips down as is proper. It is not so much what turkey trotters do with their feet, but what they do with their bodies. The association during its session will unify the steps of the approved dances in order to teach them correctly."

At the high school the attendance is 421 or about twenty more than last year and new students are expected during the coming week. It will be necessary to install additional seats to accommodate the young people in the assembly room.

At the Adams school in the second ward there are 270 pupils enrolled in the eight grades and kindergarten, the largest enrollment of any of the ward schools. This is an increase of 36 over last year. The Jefferson school is second in attendance with 303 or four more than last year. The Washington school stands third with 265, an increase of 13.

The figures for the other schools are as follows: Webster, 87; Douglas, 153; Jackson, 131; Grant, 130; Lincoln, 149; and Garfield, 102.

Principals of the ward schools state that the attendance will probably be substantially increased during the coming week. Some of the children who have been out of the city for their vacations have not returned and the transient officer will be busy rounding up others who have thus far neglected to begin their school work.

BELIEVE PRISONER FEIGNING INSANITY

William Ambrose, Held for Trial on Charges of Daughter, Acting Very Strangely of Late.

Strained conduct for the last few days on the part of William Ambrose, held at the county jail to await trial on charges preferred by his seventeen year old daughter, Lillian, leads to the belief that he is feigning insanity or else has become insane since his incarceration. The weight of opinion is in support of the former theory.

Friends of Ambrose have tried to have him examined for his sanity before he is brought to trial at District Attorney Stanley Dunwiddie would not consent to it. He will be brought to trial as planned as soon as a new judge of the municipal court is appointed. If the latter seems fit an examination will be asked for him, and should he be found insane arrangements will be made to have him turned over to the Sheriff for trial on the charges against him in case of his dismissal from the asylum as cured. This would prevent a successful feigning of insanity from being used to escape trial and possible conviction and punishment.

Ambrose appears not to recognize any one who enters his cell, not even the sheriff or turnkey. His eyes have a vacant stare and when recently taken out into the lobby for a short time he showed the same fear of a deaf that he has shown before. He also appears to be suffering from delusions of different kinds and yesterday when a man whom he had known came to see him he tried to attack him.

JANESVILLE YOUTHS PAY FOR THEIR FUN

Costs Them Twenty-Five Dollars to Pay for Goods Stolen from Cottage at Lake Koshkonong.

On Sunday, August 11, three Janesville youths played the Jesse James act at Lake Koshkonong and looted the cottage of J. L. Terry, located west of the Koshkonong hotel. They took dishes, household utensils, a gasoline stove and even the table cloth from the table. It was the Tuesday following before Mr. Terry discovered the theft and began his investigation which led to the discovery of names of the miscreants and identification of the thieves. The boys at first were inclined to bluff the matter out but later decided to settle to avoid arrest and paid Mr. Terry twenty-five dollars damages. Had they been arrested they would have been tried on the charge of house breaking and might have had to serve a jail or prison sentence.

FAMOUS AMERICAN INDIANS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE
UNCAS.

"My heart is not my own; it is yours. My braves are not mine, but yours. Command, and I obey. I will trust the English before I will trust mine own people. The Indian that slays an Englishman shall die by my hand."

The man who made this speech of loyalty to a group of grim-visaged Puritans was Uncas, sachem and hero. Nor were his words mere idle boasting. He had already proved their truth, and was yet to prove it in a far more dramatic way.

Uncas was born about 1688. He was a sub-chief of the Pequot nation, and up to middle age had had no adventures especially well worth relating. But in 1635 he headed a party of malcontents against the Pequot sachem Sassacus. In the fierce little war that followed Uncas was expelled from his "nation." But he took with him a band of loyal followers and formed a new tribe which he called the "Mohicans" (an ancient name of the Pequots). He made himself chief of the Mohicans, and conquered for them a fine stretch of land near where Lyme, Conn., now stands. Then he turned his attention to avenging himself on his old enemies, the Pequots.

A Deed of Vengeance.

The Mohicans were not strong enough to tackle them single-handed, so he signed a peace treaty with the English settlers of New England, and in 1637 joined the colonists in their expedition against the Pequot nation. Uncas guided the soldiers to the Pequots' chief stronghold, a village fortified by high wooden palisades. So fiercely did the English and Mohicans assault this town that all but fourteen of its Pequot inhabitants were slain. Then up and down through the Pequot country Uncas led the attack, until the whole "nation" that once had cast him out was subdued. In reward Uncas received a large slice of the Pequot lands. When the war was actually over he threw himself heart and soul into an effort to save the survivors of his crushed enemies from punishment at the hands of the English. So eagerly did he interfere to rescue the Pequots that the English declared him a traitor and he narrowly escaped with his life. But Uncas quickly proved his fidelity to the English, and did so in such emphatic fashion that the Pequots deemed him a double traitor and plotted to murder him.

Uncas swiftly avenged this murder plot by swooping down upon Sequasson, the Connecticut river sachem, and laying waste his villages. Next he found himself involved in a quarrel with Miantonomoh, sachem of the mighty Narragansett nation. Miantonomoh had been accused of conspiring to massacre the white settlers. In 1640 and again in 1642 the Narragansett sachem had been arrested and brought before the Massachusetts magistrates on this charge and had much trouble in clearing himself. Miantonomoh dared not attack the white men, but wreaked his spite by invading the country of their allies, the Mohicans. The Narragansetts, 1,000 strong, marched into Uncas's territory, destroying all in their path. Uncas could scrape together barely 500 men to meet the invaders. The two forces met near the Yantic river falls. Uncas strode forth between the two little armies and shouted to Miantonomoh:

"We both have many brave men at our backs. Why should many of them die in our private quarrel? Stand forward, oh Miantonomoh, and fight me, hand to hand. And let the battle's issue rest on our combat!"

Miantonomoh answered: "My men have come hither to fight. And they shall fight!" Then he gave the signal for battle.

Battle and Victory.

A terrific conflict followed. By martial skill and utter reckless courage Uncas defeated the Narragansetts—double the number of his own force—and captured Miantonomoh. Instead of dealing with his fallen foe in usual fashion, he carried Miantonomoh before a council of Massachusetts elders, who promptly condemned the captive to die. Uncas's own brother was permitted to strike the death blow. All the local tribes now combined against the Mohicans, and but for the aid sent him by the English Uncas must have been overwhelmed. As it was, he fought for years like a tiger against his allied foes, and held his own against them. Thomas Leffingwell, a settler, smuggled provisions to him once, when in 1656 he was besieged by the Narragansetts. Uncas, in gratitude, gave Leffingwell the tract of land now occupied by Norwich, Conn. Uncas lived on until 1682, dying at the age of ninety-four. To the end he refused to embrace his white allies' religion, and was described by Massachusetts clergymen in 1674 as "an old and wicked, wilful man." Uncas had all the true Indian cunning and cruelty; but he was honest, loyal and fearless—one of the foremost savages of his century.

"There are two classes of arrivals who ask you to register for them," said a hotel clerk. "One is the woman with tight gloves who really cannot write. ## PROMISE TO CLIMB ST. MARY'S STEEPLE

Two Aurora Men Will Attempt to Erect Lightning Rods on St. Mary's Church Steeple.

Tomorrow morning, Peter Drokshagan and William Fitzsimmons of Aurora, Illinois, will attempt to scale the 265 foot steeple of the St. Mary's church and erect a lightning rod on the tip of the five foot cross. Five men have attempted to accomplish this feat but every one quite before the job was finished.

The two men have just finished repairing the chimney at the Sugar Beet factory where they drilled out old bricks, replacing them and tightened and painted the bands. The chimney at the factory is 175 feet high. When asked what they thought of the job at the church, Fitzsimmons said: "That job is nothing compared to what we have done, and we will climb that steeple like a fly."

Despite the fact that there is no place where the steepjacks can gain access to the upper portion of the steeple making their climb exceedingly difficult, they expressed themselves as confident of making the trip to the cross in a few hours. The means used to make the climb will be with "sucker" shoes, the sole of which is rubber and acts with a vacuum on the side of the steeple. It is claimed by the men that a horse could not pull the climber from the wall, once the shoes are set.

William Fitzsimmons, whose home is in Rockford, claims to be the oldest steepjack in the world having passed his fiftieth birthday. In following his daring profession he has worked in all parts of the United States. The most dangerous job that he ever attempted was to place the bands around the 365 foot chimney of the Eastman Kodak company, at Rochester, New York. In placing the rods the steepjacks will be forced to stand on the arms of the cross, a total distance of 265 feet above the sidewalk below. The two men brought their equipment to the church this afternoon, and made preparations to start on the trip to the top tomorrow.

SPORT Snap-Shots

— MORRIS MILLER —

Old Bob Fitzsimmons has a bone to pick with Jim Corbett. In fact Bob has had the same bone to pick for quite a while and the thing is finally beginning to get his nan. Sixteen years ago, it will be remembered, Fitz put the cleaner on Corbett at Carson City and ever since then Gentleman Jim has insisted that Bob won on a fluke. "I was resting up in the thirteenth round and it was then that Fitz got in the work that weakened me for the round that followed. In the fourteenth he put over the lucky blow that managed to finish me in that weakened condition." That's the way Corbett explains it. And it seems reasonable. In fact, more than that, and Fitz says that if Corbett won't admit that he was licked fair and square that summer evening sixteen years ago, he (Fitz) will take Jim on again and clean him right. Or else he'll let his boy do it. Fitz would like to see his son clean up on Corbett at that. And it looks at least as if Jim had better quit beefing.

Fight fans out along the coast are considerably annoyed at the prospect of a bill being passed that will prohibit fights of more than four rounds. Following the death of Bull Young in his fight with Jess Willard, the anti-boxing people and the civic righteousness committee have started circulating initiative petitions for a law limiting the fights in the state of California to four rounds. Also they are going to try and compel the use of eight ounce gloves, which would make a prize fight a very tame affair indeed. It is a little unreasonable of the anti-boxing folks to use such an unfortunate accident as the death of Bull Young as an argument against boxing. Should it happen that a golf player was struck on the head by a fast driven golf ball and killed—and it isn't unlikely that he would be—an accident, pure and simple and no one would try to suppress or prohibit the game of golf. And though a lot of them can't seem to see it, the death of Young was just as accidental as our supposed one of the golfer. A man once tripped over a croquet wicket and broke his neck. But no one says that croquet is brutal.

Jim Corbett, Kid McCoy and Larry McLean will do lecture tour this fall after the manner of W. J. Bryan. It will be a sort of temperance lecture tour and the trinity mentioned will endeavor to convince thousands of the evils of rum. Larry McLean is booked as Exhibit A. McLean is the lucky lad who was recently traded to New York from St. Louis and as a member of the Giants and the probable pennant winners he is well pleased with things. McLean should do a great work in the interests of temperance. He was a par of the well-known "dry battery" of the Cardinals.

EX-KING OF AMERICAN TENNIS ASPIRES TO STAGE "COMEBACK" IN SPORT WORLD

William E. Larned.

The tall and husky form of William E. Larned, ex-king of American tennis, looms up in the path of Maurice E. McLaughlin, the Californian who holds the national net championship. Larned is determined to regain the title some day and shine among the great "comebacks" of the sporting world.

Tennis experts are deeply interested in the progress being made by Larned. He is one of the real veterans of American tennis.

Although well advanced in years, he still retains his wonderful strength and skill.

EVANS INTERESTED IN LOCAL ATHLETES

Beloit College Coach Hopes to Secure Several Janesville Young Men for His 1913-14 Teams.

Dana M. Evans, coach and director of athletics at Beloit college, was in this city yesterday and among other things made inquiries as to the probability of enrolling Ray Edler and Raymond Falter with the college freshman class this fall. Coach Evans is interested in both of these men, who were star athletes for the local high school during their four year course, and believes that they would be valuable additions to his football and basketball squads. Edler has already decided to enter the fine city school, while Falter, who is at present working in Milwaukee, is said to be undecided.

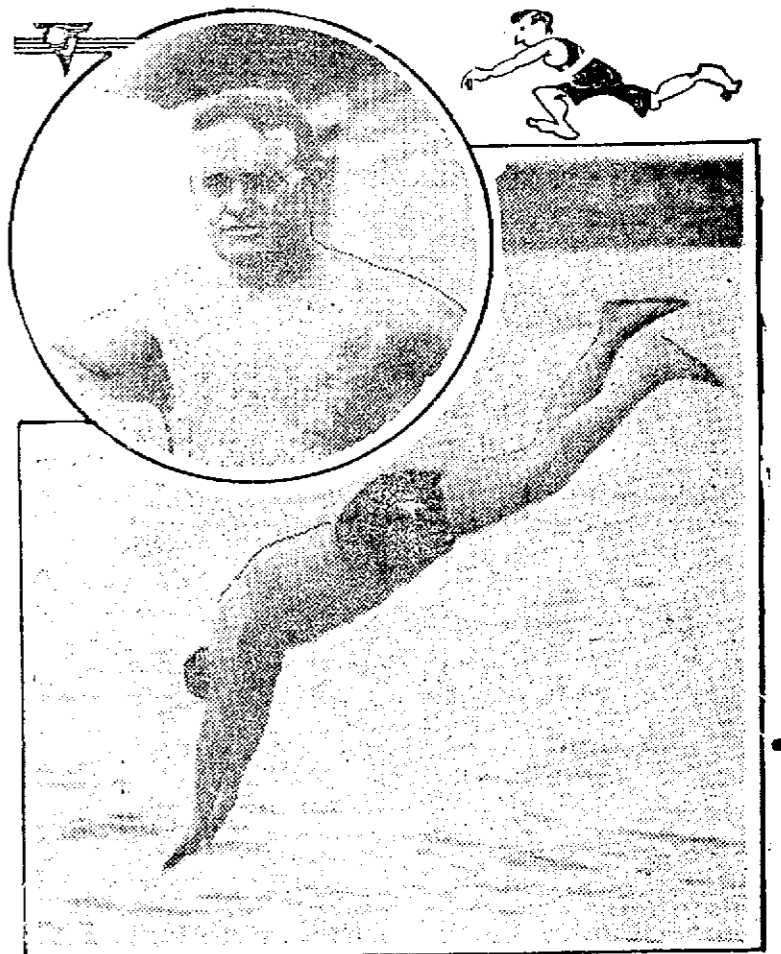

Workouts on the Beloit gridiron will begin Sept. 16, according to Coach Evans, or a week before the opening of college. Capt. Bruno has sent out notices to the old men and Coach Evans expects fifteen or more crack high school football men will be on hand for the preliminary practice. He is most optimistic as to the material from which he will shape his 1913 team.

Queer Fable About Cotton.

When cotton first came to Europe to make its principal center in Lancashire it was the subject of the quaint and wonderful fable of the "Vegetable Lamb." The fluffy white fibers of the bursting cotton pod so resembled sheep's wool that travelers reported that in Tartary there grew a shrub the fruit or boll of which contained "within a little Beastie in Flesche, in Bone and Blood, as though it were a little Lambie with outer wool." After the lamb had been eaten the wool was made into cloth, continued this story, which is the earliest European account of the manufacture of cotton.

Land Titles in Virginia.

The United States government never owned public lands in Virginia, there never was a land office in that state, and, of course, no lease or sale of public lands there. Land titles in all of the thirteen original states, including Virginia, traced back to proprietors or grantees direct from the British crown. Our present public land system was not introduced until after the establishment of the government, and the first surveys and sales of public lands in America were in the present states of Ohio and Indiana.

WRECKS AND RESPONSIBILITY.

"After the dead passengers, and those to whom they were dear, public sympathy will extend to the new president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, in the terrible wreck on that road occurring on the first day of his assumption of office," says the Wall Street Journal, in discussing wrecks and responsibility. "There is something deeper in cause than the fact the road had been legislated into inefficiency, that its staff had been nagged into a dangerous state of nerves, and that the dominance of the labor unions had made it impossible to employ the best men in the most responsible places."

"These things can be cured by time and wise management. But the congestion of traffic following public holidays, in the return of vacationists to the great cities, is a problem that is growing greater all the time. The congestion of passenger traffic on the roads arriving in New York from summer resorts has been greater this summer than ever before, and reached, as it usually does, its climax on the night of Labor day, which marks the end of the vacation period to people of brief leisure and limited means."

"Never in their history have the railroads, and more particularly the New Haven, whose holiday traffic is greater than that of any road serving New York city, had such a problem to face as that of the Labor day business this year. The traveler is willing enough to take chances. He expects to get to his destination in good time, however difficult the task of transportation may be. Even allowing for the large outward bound traffic created by the country visitors to New York, the great volume of traffic is inward bound, and as any traffic manager from the street railways up, knows, the problem becomes acute whenever everybody wants to get to the same place at the same time."

"Doubtless there will be a large development of legislative energy with such a tempting opportunity for the manufacture of political capital. But what is needed is an increase of the facilities of the railroads entering New York, and especially the New Haven. The multiplication of tracks can only be done by the raising of new capital. The underlying cause for inability to handle an enormous pressure of business without accident is the continued assaults upon credit by politicians and notoriety seekers, which make the raising of new capital for necessary extensions almost an impossibility."

"If the state legislatures will co-operate with the new management of the New Haven to such an end, even this terrible sacrifice may not have been in vain."

THE FAIRS.

This is the time of year for the various fairs throughout the country. Rock county has had practically two fair exhibits, one at Evansville and one at Peoria, although the latter was across the state line in Illinois. This week Jefferson entertains the visitors and next week comes the big state fair at Milwaukee, which Janesville tried to secure through legislative enactment but failed owing to the infusion of politics into the matter. However the state fair is the Wisconsin fair and will doubtless be well attended by residents from all parts of the state. Rock county is to be represented there by a line exhibit of grains grown within the borders of the county, which Noyes Haessler, who is one of the most successful barley growers in the United States and whose two varieties of corn—Silver King and Golden Glow—are now being grown most successfully in competition for the Gazette prizes by many young boys of the county, has charge of this exhibit and it promises to be one of the most interesting in the fair.

Aside from this many of the fancy stock that the county is famous for, so taking it all in all it promises to be a most interesting exhibit of Rock county products.

A trifle over thirty days ago the voters of Janesville expressed their confidence in the present city administration. There were many bitter opponents to his retention in office and some of these same men now seem most exercised over what they fear will be his failure to enforce the laws and ordinances that they sought to recall him for having enforced. It is like the old saying, "The Devil was sick, the Devil a Saint would be. The Devil got well, the Devil a bit was." When the mayor has demonstrated he does not intend to enforce these laws it is time to bring forward complaints, but thus far all the complaints have come from the source of his former bitter opponents.

If anybody has the idea that Isaac Stephenson means to take to the tall timber he has just purchased in the northern woods, during the coming senatorial campaign, they do not know Isaac very well. Isaac will be in line of battle on the firing line when the time comes.

Illinois is trying out the honor system with its convicts and an experimental camp has been established where the convicts guard themselves and will work for the state at road building while serving out their terms.

The American Bar association did itself the honor on Wednesday to elect Honorable William H. Taft as their president. It was a fitting tribute to a lawyer of his calibre and one in which his friends rejoice.

There can never be any compromise between law-breakers and the authorities despite the earnest efforts of men who seek to entangle the city administration in petty bickerings for their own selfish end.

The Ohio man who slept peacefully for an hour while his wife shrieked for help downstairs with her hand caught in a washing machine may not be a model husband, but think what a policeman he'd make.

ESPIONAGE MOMENT

The Diary of a Bonehead.

My neighbor is one of those motorboat experts who do not know the difference between the eccentric and the ashcan. He knows more about motorboats than Oscar Underwood knows about agate and zinc, when he is conversing with you in the safety and privacy of your own house, far from the move or less racing main. Once in the boat, he becomes the rankest type that motorboatdom ever knew and motorboatdom has known a few.

I had heard nothing but spring and out of my neighborhood all spring and early summer. The things he told me about gasoline engines, horsepower and wind resistance was sufficient to have entitled him to the Nobel peace prize for motorboating if there is any such prize. I heard motorboat over the back fence while we were hoeing our gardens and motorboat over the front hedge while we were hoeing our lawns. Yesterday he got me into the boat. Something told me to stay at home and weed the onions. Perhaps it was the subconscious mind or the sixth sense or the fourth dimension. Anyhow it saved me the best lunch I have had in nine years.

Everything that could have happened to a motorboat in five years happened to that one before we had proceeded more than two miles out in the lake. According to my neighbor's stories, nothing had ever happened to it before. But the most ardent pessimist could not have hoped for more to happen this time.

My neighbor, with his head somewhere under the engine and his feet hanging over the side of the boat and occasionally dipping into the water when there was a swell, used language that Uncle Sam Webster could not have put into his book and got it through the mails.

I think that the only thing that didn't go wrong about the boat was the flagstaff. It seemed to work beautifully all the time that we were out. The differential crashed through the windshield, the carburetor blew up and smashed the eccentric, the differential got foul of the oiling system and the lubricating caught on the gearwheels and twisted the drive shaft off from the propeller. Doubtless other things happened, but these were the things which would linger in the memory of an amateur like myself. This was at 10 o'clock in the morning. At 10 o'clock at night we were picked up by a fisherlike distant stars.

A man with five children, a fireless cooker and a phonograph depending upon him for support should keep out of motorboats and not attempt to tamper with any sort of machinery more complicated than a lawn mower.

Hot Weather Verse.

No coats or vests or shirts were worn.

In the good old days of Adam,

To keep cool it was not a chore.

In the good old days of Adam,

And right good sense the folks displayed.

When in the leaves they were arrayed.

When it's a hundred in the shade,

I wish us fat folks had 'em.

A Card of Thanks.

The thanks of the author is due to the friends who so generously shingled his house this week. For some time he has had to raise an umbrella in the front room when a shower came up with his good wife was making her way from the cook stove to the cupboard in a gasoline launch. The baby is an expert swimmer and is very much put out over the fact that her aquarium has been closed up, but thanks for the shingles and the putting on the roof. The lumber trust unconsciously donated the shingles and the operation was performed by admiring friends. Their generosity and kindness shall never be forgotten.

Interest In Colors of Beards.

The color of beards arouses many points of interest. All the ancient tapestries show Cain and Judas Iscariot with yellow or red beards, and Pontius Pilate in ancient art always was given a beard. (Being a Roman of good family, he probably had no beard; but those details did not trouble the old masters.) A reddish beard, however, does not carry the significance that goes with red hair, for many eminent men with dark brown hair have had reddish beards.

WOULD RATHER PURCHASE THAN RAISE POTATOES

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 4.—Despite the fact that central Alabama has a soil suitably adapted to the growing of Irish potatoes, the late crop which is now being gathered is so small that it is not sufficient to supply the demand of the state for two weeks. Much disappointment is expressed at the state agricultural department, where the principal effort of the past year has been the procuring of the doctrine of diversification. Instead of planting a variety of crops the farmers generally have placed their entire reliance in cotton. Fortunately the cotton crop this year is good and no great inconvenience will be felt as money will be plentiful and the farmers can afford to pay the price asked for northern potatoes. More general diversification is expected next year, however, as even the most sanguine cotton farmer does not hope for four big years in succession.

SMALL BOYS DROWN IN RIVER AT ALBANY

Two Sons of Mrs. Fred Stiff, One Aged Eight and the Other A Year Old Drowned This Afternoon. Albany, Wis., Sept. 4.—Two small sons of Mrs. Fred Stiff, one eight years old and the other aged one year, were drowned in the Sugar river a short distance below this village, about three o'clock this afternoon. The two boys were in bathing and were taken to their mother who remained on shore by means of ropes. The little fellows ventured too far into the treacherous water and stepped off a ledge. The frantic mother hastened to draw them ashore and proceeded to row home with them. When she arrived physicians were summoned but they pronounced them both dead, having passed away thirty minutes before the examination.

What Frightened Him.

During furnace-cleaning operations in a large steel works the workmen occasionally had to walk across a plank high in the air. One of them would cross it on his hands and knees. "Are you frightened of walking on the plank?" the foreman said to him once. "No, sir," replied the man; "I'm frightened I am of walking off it!"

Missshapen Dog. A French scientist possesses a dog which, having been born without hind legs, has supplied nature's deficiency and has learned to walk and even to run quite swiftly on its two front legs. It holds the upright position with the greatest ease, turns, stops, stands resting, eats its food, etc., with its hind quarters poised over its head. It is said not to be more wearied by exercise than an ordinary dog.

Work of the Teacher.

To help the young soul; to add energy, to inspire hope, and to blow the coals into a useful flame; to redeem defeat by a new thought, firm action; that is not easy, that is the work of divine men.—Emerson.

Women as Dramatists.

I have yet to see a woman's play in which the male characters shall seem real and vital. As portrayers of a sex not their own, men have a decided advantage over women.—Max Beerholm.

Separate Hymnal for Canada. A new Anglican hymnal has been provided for use by the Canadians, because, owing to climatic conditions, they are unable to sing the high notes of the English hymnal.

Don't Wait For Your Hogs To Get Sick

It is easier to prevent disease in man or beast than it is to cure it. Many of the hog raisers in this section have sold their hogs at the first sign of sickness. Others have lost them by the dozen rather than sell sick hogs.

And still others have used Sal-Vet when their hogs started to cough, and now have a good sound bunch that will bring top prices when marketed.

One pound of Sal-Vet will last one hog 60 days. And is sold on a guarantee.

If you lose one small pig you have lost the price of 100 lbs. of Sal-Vet and the rest of your herd is also in danger.

Don't run chances on something "just as good" when you can get something that has stood the test and is guaranteed.

40 lbs. Sal-Vet	$2.25
20 lbs. Sal-Vet	$1.25

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

THE HOUSEHOLD EFFICIENCY CLUB.

WHAT is the matter with the household efficiency club? Some months ago I suggested that we have a household efficiency club through which all the reader friends could pass on to each other any simple little hints which their experience with housework had taught them. We were to use our column once a month or oftener to print these suggestions in. All women interested in the great science of housekeeping were asked to join, one idea was the initiation fee. I expected to be deluged with ideas, and here I am several months later with only a tiny budget of letters at hand.

I've waited and waited for my good reader friends to wake up. I can't believe there aren't plenty of women among them bright enough to think up short cuts and generous enough to share them. I suppose that in the rush of their own daily affairs they must have just forgotten our club. Perhaps a symposium from those who didn't forget will be a sufficient reminder.

"You can make a good frosting board out of one of your extension table boards," suggests another woman; "I have tried it and find it works perfectly."

"I always keep some canned pineapples on hand," is another suggestion; "because I have found that it makes a good dessert to add a little pineapple to almost any fruit such as banana or orange. The pineapple gives a rich and better flavor to any such mixture."

"When soaking a soiled garment in gasoline," writes another friend, "it helps a great deal to have the gasoline warm. Of course you should never have gasoline in the same room with a stove or any kind of flame. The only way to warm it is to set the vessel containing the gasoline into a tub of warm water. We simply run warm water into the bathtub and set the vessel in that."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Things Worth Knowing.

A pinch of orange will be found an excellent substitute for polish on shoes. Rub the leather well with it and, when dry, polish with a soft cloth.

Light soapsuds are said to be excellent for making plants grow and blossom, on account of the polish therein.

Peanut meats, chopped and laid between slices of buttered brown bread, make delicious sandwiches.

Never fold or roll an umbrella when wet, but keep it rolled when dry, if you would have the ribs keep their shape.

The Table.

Princess Loaf.—Make a good pound cake mixture in a hexagonal pan, and after scooping out the interior, frost with pale green icing flavored with pistachio or vanilla, as preferred. Whip a pint of heavy cream until stiff, sweeten to taste, add a tablespoonful of gelatin dissolved in a little hot milk, and fold in. Highly a cupful of strawberries cut up quite fine. Fill the cake with this mixture and set on the ice for three or four hours.

Current Sherbet.—Boil together three cupfuls of sugar and four cupfuls of water until a syrup is formed. Add a pint of red currant juice. Strain and freeze, adding the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs when partly done. Serve in sherbet glasses.

Blackberry Farina.—Heat a quart of blackberry juice to the boiling point, sweeten to taste, add a pinch of salt, and stir in gradually a cupful of farina. Cook until thick, stirring frequently, then pour into small molds and set on ice to chill. At serving time unmold, garnish with large blueberries and serve with cream.

Current Cream.—Dissolve a tumbler of red currant jelly in a pint of cream, and add a little sugar if not sufficiently sweet. Pour a heaping tablespoonful of gelatin in a little water, beat it into the cream thoroughly, and pour the mixture into a mold to harden. When firm turn out and garnish with currants. Serve plain or with cream.

Crystal Cake.—One cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, three cupfuls of cornstarch, one cupful of flour, one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, one teaspoonful of grated nutmeg, two eggs, white of one egg. Beat the butter and sugar to a cream, add the eggs well beaten, then stir in the flour, cornstarch, baking powder and nutmeg. Mix into a nice dough. If too dry add a very little milk. Divide into small pieces, pat them flat, brush them over with the beaten white of egg and sprinkle over with granulated sugar. Place apart on buttered pans and bake in a moderately warm oven until done.

Pineapple Delight.—One cupful of chopped pineapple, one tablespoonful of gelatin, two tablespoonfuls of rice, three-quarters cupful of sugar, one cupful of whipping cream, two cupfuls of boiling water or of pineapple juice. Boil the rice until very soft, then drain it. Dissolve the gelatin in the boiling water, then add the sugar and the rice. Cool slightly and add the salt, the pineapple and the whipping cream. Cool and serve in dairy glasses with a cherry on the top of each.

Ruthven Salad Cream.—Mix one-half tablespoonful of salt, one-fourth cupful of mustard, and three-fourths cupful of sugar. When well blended, add one egg, slightly beaten, two and one-half cupfuls of melted butter, three-fourths cupful of thin cream and, slowly one-fourth cupful of vinegar. Cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly until mixture forms a coating on the spoon, as in cooking a soft custard. Strain and cool. For occasional variety make the following addition to this dressing: Dry one can of pineapple thoroughly on a piece of cheesecloth and force through a puree strainer. This dressing is good with egg salad.

Cat Only Living Thing on Derelict.

From a derelict ship a cat was rescued near Plymouth, England, a few days ago. H. M. S. Donegal had received orders to search for and sink the derelict Norwegian barque Blennmark. The Blennmark had been dismantled and abandoned more than a month ago. Her crew was rescued and taken to Liverpool by the steamer Dunholme. The Donegal picked up the ship 500 miles out, but finding the hull sound determined to save her. The only living thing on board the derelict was a cat, which had been driven mad by thirst and which severely bit a bluejacket who stroked it.

Every Day Talks for Every Day People

By FRANCIS JOYCE KENNEDY

Talents and skill go far in work, but conscience goes farther. The mechanic, the clerk, any salaried person who, beyond his stated salary or obligations, exerts himself to make his work as perfect as possible and takes a personal interest in seeing how really well he can do each day's work—irrespective of each day's pay—has a value which cannot easily be reckoned. It matters not what the work be, whether it be done with a spade of the laborer, the tool of the mechanic, the pen of the clerk, or the voice of the statesman. Some people are sought; there are places always open to them, their services seem to be at a premium. Some of our young—some of us older ones, too, seem to think a good position is to be obtained by "pull." Now "pull" will get a person a position but it never has and it never will keep it for one. If the majority of us people who are working for a salary were as anxious to do a dollar's worth of work as we are to draw the dollar, there would be more of us in line for promotion. Trouble is we're afraid we'll do more than we're paid for doing. That we'll overwork ourselves and it will not be appreciated. Perish the thought that we could stay a few minutes overtime. Still we are surprised if we be "checked" for time lost.

In a little talk with the managers of our various stores I find that the question of salary is secondary. "We want efficient help and are willing to pay a wage for the same," seems to be the united opinion of them all. Help that can be depended on, that takes an interest in their work, that serve their employers conscientiously and well. Such people are not long in getting to the top. A man or woman who has brains and incentive enough to embark in business surely has brains enough to know who is an "eye servant" in their employ and who is not. That's something for us all to remember. "Do it better!" is a good motto for all the young folks of our town and country to paste in their hat. Letting well enough alone never raised a salary. Do it better!

MRS. JOHN ASTOR OUT FOR SOCIAL LEADERSHIP OF NEW YORK? ARRIVES THERE AND 'TIS SAID WAR FOR SUPREMACY IMPENDS

With the arrival of Mrs. John Astor, first wife of the late Colonel Astor, in New York, society is busy asking the question: Does she propose to become the social arbiter of Gotham's four hundred?

Although Mrs. Astor declares that her sole purpose in returning to America is to keep her son Vincent from turning farmer, there is a well-defined impression among the city's "smart set" that she plans a social campaign to take the place of her former husband's mother as the recognized leader of New York society.

At least the innermost inner circles, presided over erstwhile by those three clever women, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. Ogden Mills and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, are visibly agitated.

SUFFRAGISTS AT CAPITAL KEEP BUSY DURING HOT MONTHS; USE INFLUENCE ON SENATORS FOR SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT

Mrs. Helen Gardner (left) and Alice Paul.

There will be no vacation season for suffragist leaders at the national capital this summer. They are working overtime in the effort to convert senators to the equal suffrage cause. Probably the two busiest women in the capital are Miss Alice Paul, in charge of the Washington headquarters, and Mrs. Helen Gardner, the authoress, who is chairman of the press committee. They are doing some very effective

HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS.

When making pie crust, mix up enough without adding the water for several pies, and put the mixture into the ice chest, then when a pie is wanted all that is necessary is to add the water and roll out.

To pick out obstinate pin feathers in a fowl, a pair of tweezers will be found most useful.

A glove finger cut from an old glove is a protection to the curtain when slipping it on to the rod.

To Cook Canned Corn.—Remove the paper from the can and set into the tea kettle; after fifteen minutes open, pour out and season. Corn cooked in this way is never scorched. Pour into a dish with bits of butter.

Cover the cut side of the watermelon with oiled paper and turn down on a plate.

Have baking sheets cut from sheet iron to fit the oven, with two of the edges turned a half of an inch for convenience in handling. A whole row of cookies may be baked in the oven at a time, and if using gas this is an item worth remembering.

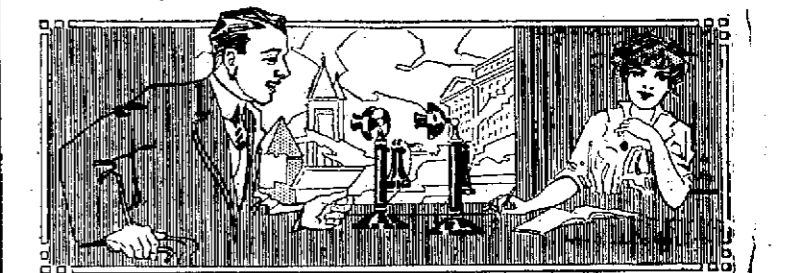

Save stockings legs after the hose are past wearing. They make fine holders, stove cleaners and small dust-ers.

To relieve a scald or burn, apply equal parts of lime water and olive oil. If this is not convenient, the white of an egg quickly applied to keep out the air is soothing and cooling.

Sprinkle the top of the pie before baking with cold water; it will make the crust more flaky.

Caramel Bananas.—Peel three bananas and cut them into strips. Lay them in a baking dish, dredged with flour and a teaspoonful of cinnamon. Put in two tablespoonfuls of butter, cut in bits, and sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of sugar, a tablespoonful of lemon juice and a little salt. Pour in half a cup of boiling water and bake quickly.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

By MRS. LIZARDSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I keep house for my brothers and a sister of fifteen. My advice is no account to them, I am only eighteen. We have poor house furnishings and it keeps us hustling to keep it of debt. My sister insists on having silk and satin dresses and since she is the "pet" she gets them.

She is pretty, has just begun going with boys, has a very bad temper and is hateful with any one who displeases her. The girl she claims with is very sweet, not so pretty as my sister.

My sister thinks it is very lady-like to dress up around home. She wears a corset all the time. She puts on her best dresses to work in, without an apron.

Her chum always looks neat at home and yet she has no great amount of clothing. Her clothing fits.

(1) Which girl do you admire most?

(2) I met a very nice young man one year my senior over two years ago. We have been together about half a dozen times since then. At first he wrote often and I always answered as often. Then he went to another city and for half a year I did not hear from him. When I did it was a letter and a picture.

Five months ago he came to see me and we spent a pleasant evening together. When he was ready to go I asked him when he would come again? He said, "maybe never," and I was so sick I did not know what to do. He is the only one I have ever met that has acted as a real gentleman and I hate to give him up.

We wrote afterward and I was careful not to give any unkind words and yet I did not say I loved him. I received a letter a month later saying he wished me to forget him.

SISTER.

(1) Real ladies never "dress up" in the house unless there is a party or some great event happening. Your little sister has been getting wrong notions somewhere. She would be acting more like the great ladies if she wore simple, sensible little wash dresses about the home, and simple, pretty dresses to suit her civility outside of the house. The young daughters of wealthy people may wear very costly dresses, but they don't LOOK costly, because that is considered bad taste. It is only the silly-boys who run after a dress-up girl. The boy who will make a good man and a husband who can afford to support a wife comfortably, likes to see a girl look pretty, but he gets scared off when she dresses extravagantly.

(2) Better forget this young man, dear. He has told you plainly that you must have no hopes concerning him. He probably feels that he is unable to care for a wife, or he may have done something which makes it impossible for him to marry a good girl. At least he is square, and you better take him at his word.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you please tell me something to do to reduce my flesh, something that will give quick results? There is no quick flesh-reducer that is safe. If you want to die quickly, or become an invalid for life, try one of these quick flesh reducers. If you want to get thinner, eat less and drink less. Take a hot bath every day and perspire freely. Every other day put two pounds of Epsom salts in the bath water. I won't say that the daily bath and Epsom salts will be the best thing in the world for you, but they are about the healthiest flesh reducers I know of.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE DEPARTMENT

COMPILED BY MRS. LIZARDSON

That should not be permitted unless the teacher does the trading, and then only when she understands exactly what each individual child should have better than the one who prepares the lunch.

So much for the younger ones, but the older ones cannot go home but must have their luncheon at school five days a week. There should be a list of many varieties of sandwiches, only putting down those which are nourishing and especially liked by the children. Whole wheat bread and butter, generous helping of good brown sugar makes a sandwich the children like and will add also to the necessary energy required.

Sandwiches spread with jam and nut meats pressed into each slice are very satisfying and if cut round or oblong and wrapped in paraffine paper often taste a lot better for the extra thought in their preparation.

Green food is required the year round and mothers should not forget it. Lettuce, parsley, onions, tomatoes, celery, cabbage, radishes and green beans all furnish in large quantities the necessary salts for a human body. The lack of these and whole wheat bread is more often the cause of poor teeth than too much candy.

Luncheon should be changed with the weather. As cool weather comes on more sugar and fat are demanded than on hot summer days because additional heat must be generated to keep warm, and when the fresh fruits are not in season year dried fruits such as figs, dates and raisins served plain or baked in bread and cake.

BIG COUNTY EXHIBIT AT THE STATE FAIR

Noyes Raessler Has Charge of Rock County Booth.—Carload of Products is Shipped.

Visitors at the state fair in Milwaukee next week will know that at the region of the state fair exhibit building, a carload of exhibits has been shipped and will make an excellent display, a credit to this section of the state.

Noyes Raessler, secretary of the Rock county experiment association has taken the matter in charge this year and has solicited exhibition products from members of the association and others in various parts of the county.

Mr. Raessler feels confident that Rock county will not only make an exceptional showing with its booth but that it will carry off a prize near the top of the list. Every person in Rock county who attends the fair next week should not fail to visit the county exhibit building and note especially the attractiveness of the Rock county booth.

Copyright, 1909, by George Matthew Adams

The paper tells of wedding bells and head breaking and dancing and blushing; of men who waste their lives in haste; upon their foolish errands rushing; of politics and rigsters' tricks; of Windy Jims with schemes mending; of priests and nuns and big game and travelers and mothers o'er sick children bending. The paper tells of prison cells where human junk is safely hoarded; of church and pew, where I and you hear helpful sermons, aptly worded. WHAT'S IN where broken men THE PAPER have heard the doors clanging; describes the hall where on the wall a hundred priceless prints are hanging. The paper speaks of ugly leaks discovered in the nation's coffers; of noble schemes and rosy dreams; and of the sneers of ribald scoffers; and of kings and kings all things that chance on earth, in prose or verse; of pain, relief, of joy and grief, and farewell tours in sable hearse. A YOUNG PATRIOT.

Dear Mr. President:—I am the little boy who was waved at when you were in Marshall, Tex., and I waved back at you. I never will forget how you looked. You are the only president I have ever seen. I am seven years old, I live with my grandma. My little mother went to heaven when I was fifteen days old. I have no brothers nor sisters. I would like to get a letter from you written with your own dear hand. I hope that you will not disappoint me. I know the names of all the presidents and the year in which they served our country. With best wishes for your future, I am sincerely yours,

GEORGE LANE CORELY.
Honey Grove, Tex.

The above touching letter was received by Mr. Taft at the White House only a few weeks before he was scheduled to leave office. Needless to say, the lad had his wish, for he received not only a letter written by the president's own hand, but an autographed photo. The boy's letter will be kept among the Taft mementos.

There is one thing in the childish missive that should be taken to heart by every boy in the land. Although but seven, he knows the names of all our presidents and the years of their inauguration. Probably he also knows other things about them.

There could be no more helpful or inspiring study to any boy than that of the lives of our presidents.

In nearly every case these presidents were themselves poor boys who won their way to our highest office by sheer merit—ability, honor, service to their country.

"They were all good men. After the clouds of partisan passion have cleared away we can see this. No country in history ever had a line of executives whose character was so uniformly high and unblemished.

Moreover, some of them were very great men.

Washington and Lincoln compare favorably with the greatest figures of any time or clime.

There are others of the second rank, but little behind these—Jefferson and Jackson, Grant, Cleveland, McKinley and others. Of those yet living there is too much difference of opinion and partisan heat for them now to be given their true rank. But history will assign them their places.

Of all the twenty-six who have held this lofty post one thing can be said that should give us infinite pride: There has never been a stain on their personal honor.

Their home lives have been clean. They have been free from scandal. If you would learn patriotism, if you would discover the road to success, study the lives of our presidents.

MODERN INVENTIONS
The Ham Sandwich
By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Slawash."

The ham sandwich is the greatest American substitute for food. A ham sandwich consists of a hinged bun with a suspicion of ham between halves. Modern science has now made it possible to slice ham so thin that one pig can upholster 5,000 ham sandwiches.

When eaten the ham is liberally smeared with mustard. Thus the eater imagines that he could taste the ham if it were not for the mustard and is perfectly happy. A new sandwich is now being tested in which the ham is painted on the inside of the bun, and it is giving very satisfactory results.

The ham sandwich is the mainstay of the American traveler. It forms the principal bill of fare at railroad lunch counters. A railroad lunch counter may have heard of a ham sandwich, but it is conducted for the benefit of the traveler and the common man stands no show with it.

traveler has looked over the assortment he generally resorts to the sandwich.

One ham sandwich will keep the ordinary traveler from wanting any more food for 100 miles. This brings down the cost of traveling in a remarkable manner. Men and women have been known to travel for a week at a time existing entirely on ham sandwiches and a peculiar brown drink also found at railroad lunch counters and resembling coffee in price and its manner of application.

The ham sandwich is legal tender for a nickel in all parts of the country except along a few railroads so lost to honor as to charge 10 cents a piece for everything it sells to the traveler. When a railroad charges 10 cents for the ordinary ham sandwich of commerce, it can be viewed with suspicion. It is conducted for the benefit of the traveler and the common man stands no show with it.

"Because I read the extract myself."
"But even then?"
"Then he began to pay more attention. It was easy enough to fake when he knew what was doing. For all I know, he could hear Eldridge giving his directions."

The company present ruminated over the disclosures thus far made. "About the City Hall affair?" asked Helen finally.
"I used to sit where I could command the hall," said Darrow, "and, therefore, I was aware that Monsieur X never left his room. To make the matter certain, I powdered the sill of the door with talcum, which I renewed every day after the cleaners. You remember we got to talking very earnestly in the hall, so earnestly that I, for one, forgot to watch. When I realized my remissness, I saw that the powder on the sill had been disturbed, that Monsieur X had gone out."

"My first thought then was to warn the people. To that end, I was on my way to the Dispatch office when sheer chance switched me into the City Hall tragedy. I possessed myself of the apparatus—"

"That was the square black bag!" cried Jack.

"Of course—and hustled back to the Atlas Building. You can bet I was relieved when I found that Monsieur X had returned to his lair."

"Talcum disturbed again?" asked Jack.

"Precisely."

"And the black bag?"

"Contained merely a model wireless apparatus with a clockwork arrangement set to close the circuit at a certain time. That is why Monsieur X was not involved in his own catastrophe."

"I see!"

"Then all I had to do was toast still and wait for him to become dangerous."

"How did you dare to take such chances?" cried Helen.

"I took no chances," answered Darrow. "Don't you see? If he were to attempt to destroy the city, he must either involve himself in the destruction, or he must set another bit of clockwork. If he had left his office again I should have seized him, broken into the office, and smashed the apparatus."

Powdered the Sill of the Door With Talcum.

"But he was crazy," spoke up Mrs. Warford. "How could you rely on his not involving himself in the general destruction?"

"Yes, why did you act when you did?" seconded Helen.

"As long as he held to his notion of getting hold of McCarthy," explained Darrow, "he had a definite object in life, his madness had a definite outlet—he was harmless. But the last message showed that his disease had progressed to the point where McCarthy was forgotten. His mind had risen to a genuine frenzy. He talked of general punishments, great things. At last he was in the state of mind of the religious fanatic who lacerates his flesh and does not feel the wound. When he forgot McCarthy, I knew it was time to act. Long since I had provided myself with the requisite key. You know the rest."

CHAPTER XXIV.
What Happened Afterward.
There remains only to tell what became of the various characters of the tale.

McCarthy, on whom the action started, returned, but never regained his political hold. Darrow always maintained that this was only the most obvious result of his policy of delaying the denouement. People had been forced to think seriously of such matters; and, when aroused, the public conscience is right.

Darrow demanded, and received, the large money reward for his services in the matter. Pocketing whatever blame the public and his fellow scientists saw fit to hand out to him, he and Jack Warford disappeared in command of a small schooner. The purpose of the expedition was kept secret; its direction was known only to those most intimately concerned. If it ever returns, we may know more of it.

Eldridge went on being a scientist, exactly as before.

Simmons received a gold medal, a large cash sum, any amount of newspaper space, and an excellent opportunity to go on a vaudeville circuit.

Hallowell had his salary raised; and received in addition that rather vague brevet title of "star reporter."

Helen Warford is still attractive and unmarried. Whether the latter condition is only pending the return of the expedition is not known.

As for the city, it has gone back to its everyday life, and the rifles on the surface have smoothed themselves away. In outside appearances everything is as before. Yet for the present generation, at least, the persistence of the old independent self-reliance of the people is assured. They have been tested, and they have been made to think of elemental things seriously. For some time to come the slow process for standardization has been arrested.

(THE END.)

Dinner Stories

DINNER STORIES
An Irishman was walking along the bank of a river, when he heard a man in the middle of the stream cry out for help. He paid no attention to the man's cries.

"Help! Help! I can't swim!" came the voice again, and the Irishman scornfully shouted back:

"Well, shut up. I can't swim either, but, begorra, I don't go round bragging about it."

Norah had arrived from Erin's Isle a week before, and was with difficulty being "broken in" to the routine of an English household. Cleanliness was not a very strong point with her, and her cooking, apart from "spuds," was hardly all that could be desired.

"If you are not quite sure on any point, come and ask me at once," said the mistress.

Dinner was just about to be served when there was a clatter along the hall, and the breathless Norah held her head around the dining room door.

"Please, ma'am," she asked, "and how will I be knowing when the pudding is done enough?"

"Stick a knife into it," said her mistress, with a resigned air. "If the knife comes out clean, the pudding is ready to serve."

"Yes, ma'am," said Norah; "and I'll be after that crathur that's boiling over."

"And, oh, Norah!—the mistress had an after-thought—"If the knife does come out clean, you might stick all the rest of the knives into the pudding."

CHAPTER I.
The Boarders.

REGARDING the events of that rainy autumn evening at Mrs. Moore's boarding-house in the far West, twenty miles of New York, accounts differ somewhat—although not enough, after all, but that we may piece together a connected story. Until the great event, they were trivial. It was the reflected light of the tragedy which gave them their importance.

Most of the boarders remained indoors, since it was too wet in the early evening for going out of doors. With comfort after dinner, Miss Harding and Miss Jones, stenographers who shared a room-and-alcove on the second floor, entertained "company" in the parlor on the ground floor—the young office-mates so figurative, but dimly in this tale. These callers came at eight o'clock. A few minutes later Professor Noll joined them. Professor Noll was a diet delusionist, the assistant editor of a health-food magazine.

He lived on the third floor, across the hall from Captain Hankska, in a room furnished (as the Captain himself remarked) during one of his genial moments with all the latest of home appliances. For Professor Noll had traveled widely, gathered experience and junk; and in every part of the world he had bought freely of gilt-and-trash curios.

He was as proud of that bizarre apartment as though it had been the Louvre. A charming old man was Professor Noll when he was disappointed from his lobby—and occasionally from his study—by the lack of a pair of silver-silk hair and a little pair of china-blue eyes accentuated a personality all innocence, guile and old-age prattle.

Miss Harding and Miss Jones had not arrived at that point with their young men where they wanted to visit alone. When Professor Noll entered and suggested music, they welcomed him, and they all sang the foolish, ephemeral songs of the picture-shows. Mrs. Moore stood in the hall for a time, listening. Miss Jones spied her and invited her in. She was a landlady of the lubricious type, she was silently over the sentimental passages with rhymes on "poesy," "coziness" and "proposey"; and eventually she joined the voice with the singing. Once or twice she let momentarily to look after towels, furnace-heat and other house-wifely cares. One of these took her to the top of the house, where Miss Estrilla, the lady sick with weak eyes, and in her bed-ridden room. She was a new-comer, this Miss Estrilla, and not yet well enough to take her meals in the dining-room. Miss Estrilla's brother, an entertaining trick of the tongue, was reading to her by a shaded lamp, as he often did of evenings. When Mrs. Moore rejoined the others, they were singing full-voiced.

On the stairs Mrs. Moore met Captain Hankska passing up from his late and solitary dinner. He was a little irregular about meals; and this evening he had come in, demanding dinner, after a long wait.

The boarding-house liked Captain Hankska, and half-disliked him. Rather (and more accurately) all half-liked and half-disliked him. A large man, of forty-five or so, he looked at first sight rather bloated, and at second only gross and big through the accumulation of middle-aged muscle and the thicker flow of middle-aged blood. He was built necked to broad shoulders, wide of waist and heavy of leg. Everything about him denoted old strength gone stale. In face he showed the traces of what must have been great youthful comeliness. Even now, he had an eye which could be both keen and kind when his mood was gentle. Those moods of his puzzled every one. No man could be more irritable at times, as though, as all the feminine part of the house testified, could be more charming, more understanding of women. There was a curious quality beneath all that, a quality which none of Mrs. Moore's boarders had the discernment to formulate. It was as though some inner driving energy sought an outlet, and found no way through that accumulation of flesh and blood and muscle.

Before he started up the stairs, he paused an instant at the parlor door and looked upon the singers.

"Come on in—the water's fine!" called Miss Harding jocularly.

Captain Hankska returned no answer. Apparently one of his sardonic glances was on his lips, but he let it die there and he turned away.

"He can certainly be a grouchy when he wants to," said Miss Harding, as though apologizing to the young men.

"Mercie!" exclaimed Miss Jones. And they resumed their singing. As Captain Hankska passed Mrs. Moore on the lower flight of stairs, his head was bent and he gave no sign of recognition.

Mrs. Moore did not leave the parlor. She testified afterward, until Mr. Lawrence Wade called, asking for Captain Hankska. As on previous occasions, he gave her his card, which he read. Mr. Lawrence Wade, curfew Club, he had called before; whether two or three times, Mrs. Moore's memory would never serve to tell. But she recognized him perfectly—she would have known him anywhere, she said.

"Gee, who's your swell friend—he certainly could lean me up blushing to the altar," had been Miss Harding's tribute the first time she saw him. For he was very comely—a comeliness that was a perfect blend of caste and character. And that night she flashed a languishing roll of her big eyes after the tall figure as it disappeared.

"That fellow would fit for a clothing house ad—our collars do fit around the neck!" she whispered to the company; whereupon every one giggled.

Mrs. Moore carried the card to Captain Hankska's room in the third floor. "What is it?" he growled, as she knocked.

"Mr. Wade to see you," she replied. She remembered afterward that he paused for an instant before he answered; also she heard a rustling as though some one were moving about.

"I've gone to bed," he said after the pause. "Where is he? Down-stairs?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then show him up," said the Captain. "But say I've gone to bed."

Mrs. Moore turned back to summon Mr. Wade, as she did so, Mr. Estrilla came down from the floor above.

"Oh, good evening, Mr. Estrilla!" said Mrs. Moore. "Did your sister—"

Just then the voice of Captain Hankska broke in from behind the door.

"Wait a minute, ask Mr. Wade if he minds my not getting up. I've a cold and I've taken some medicine."

"Very well, Captain," replied Mrs. Moore. Estrilla, seeing that she was engaged, went on down-stairs to the front door.

This narrative has gone so far, from the point of view of Mrs. Moore. We will shift now to Miss Harding; for a time let her mind be the crystal of our thought. We shall find it a scattering and superficial mind, but furnished forth with good memory, the trick of observation, and an instinct for concrete expression. A moment before Mrs. Moore came back and told Mr. Wade that Captain Hankska would see him, Mr. Estrilla appeared at the door of the parlor. Although they had seen but little of him at Mrs. Moore's, he was popular for a Latin lightness of temperament, a cheerful and winning smile, a pliable wit which lost nothing because of his quaint accent, and various, winsome, fancies which Mrs. Moore called "capers." At that moment they were singing yip-hi-daddy-hi-y, then in its first run. Mr. Estrilla, bundled up in hat and mackintosh, cut a curve in the hall, kicked out one of his small Andalusian feet, joined a note of chorus in a pleasant, light, tenor voice, changed to a falsetto tone which was plainly an imitation of Miss Harding's singing and whirled toward the outer door. Miss Harding called:

"Come in and sing!" But Mr. Estrilla only pivoted through the door, calling:

"Buena noches—yip-hi-daddy-hi-y!"

Perhaps five minutes later, Miss Harding went upstairs for a handkerchief. For a moment she was absent-minded—a rare thing with her—so that instead of running on the stairs, where her room was situated, she continued another flight and brought up, suddenly aware of her mistake, at the third-floor landing.

Something held her there for a moment—the sound of high words from Captain Hankska's room. Miss Harding paused longer than necessary. She was an honorable girl enough, but the most honorable of us pay instinctive tribute to our curiosity.

"I tell you both I won't," came Captain Hankska's rather harsh voice.

"Oh, I think perhaps I can make you change your mind," came cheer accents which, Miss Harding edited, went perfectly with the personality of Mr. Lawrence Wade.

"Some sort of a rumpous on up the stairs," said Miss Harding as she regained the parlor. Then remembering that she must account to Miss Jones for her presence on the third floor—the bachelor quarters of the establishment—she added vaguely, "You can hear it just as plainly."

They had all stopped singing from very weariness of voice, and Mrs. Moore and Professor Noll had retired to leave the young couples alone with their devices, when Mr. Wade appeared again in the hall on this time on his way out. Every one saw him plainly, especially Miss Harding, who sat facing the door.

"Law, who's here, Essie!" she whispered in an undertone to Miss Jones. As she recalled it afterward, she seemed a little pale. He cast no more than one quick absent glance at the group by the piano; and the door behind him.

Mrs. Moore had gone to bed on the ground floor. A basic principle of the Noll Scientific Plan of Diet was light sleep. Therefore, Mrs. Moore, the maid, after clearing up from dinner, always left a glass of hygienic butter-milk and two proteose biscuits on the sideboard. Professor Noll ate slowly, glancing at his watch now and then that he might assure himself as to the proper timing on each monthful. So he did not go upstairs until just before the company left. Captain Hankska, as I have said, lived just across the hall from Mrs. Moore. The light was out in the Captain's room, he remembered, and everything seemed quiet. Nothing, he testified afterward, happened to disturb his sleep. "However," he suggested, "to throw in—scientific diet makes sound slumber." Within ten minutes, the "company" left and the young women went to their room. There was silence in the house.

Silence until half past two o'clock—and then Tommy North, who occupied the third floor front, came home from a stag smoker drunk.

Tom North had a previous cross-road of his life, this Tommy North, the attractive young man—stubby, bright-eyed, red-headed, quick-tongued, and twenty-eight. His business of writing and selling advertising gave him all kinds of contact with all kinds of attractive people who liked him for his flashes of wit and his genuine warmth of heart. They were the kind of people, unfortunately, who conduct their social life before gilded bars, or about luxurious cafe tables. So it happened that Tommy was saving wild oats and irrigating them with good liquor; and they had begun to sprout in his system. This was not the first time that he had returned, uncertain of tongue and foot, in the hours of vice. On the last occasion, he made so much noise that Miss Harding refused him her countenance for a week and Mrs. Moore gave him warning. That warning rested at the bottom of his maddling psychology as he crept up to the front door, unlocked it, and stole within.

PATRIOTIC SOUTHERNERS PLEDGE BIG FUND TO PRESERVE LAST WHITE HOUSE OF CONFEDERACY; TO BECOME HISTORICAL MUSEUM

Last White House of the Confederacy, at Danville, Va.

The identity of the old Sutherland residence at Danville, Va., the last white house of the Confederacy, is to be preserved. The administrators of the estate of the late Mrs. W. T. Sutherland had determined upon the division of the beautiful estate into building lots, but patriotic people throughout the south united in the effort to preserve this relic of the Civil War.

This house is the last that sheltered Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy, after his flight from Richmond. It was there that Davis received word from General R. E. Lee of the latter's surrender at Appomattox. The table and chairs are still preserved on which he wrote his last messages and signed his last official documents and in which he leaned back with a weary soul.

It is proposed to convert the property into a public park and museum of history.
